

Matter Based Pricing vs User Based Pricing

How Clarra Gives You as Much as 50% Savings
Compared to Other Practice Management Software

One of the most important things law firms should consider when choosing practice management software is COST. Is it expensive? How much money should you pay upfront and every month thereafter? Do the perceived benefits outweigh the additional cost? These are important questions to ask especially for small to middle-sized law firms who want to improve their practice using technology but are worried about the upfront and maintenance costs of implementing a solution.

How Much Does a Typical Legal Management Software Cost?

$39-$125 / User

Most cloud-based practice management software is typically priced on a per-user, per-month basis. With this pricing model, the cost increases as you add more users.

What is Clarra's Matter-Based Pricing?

Clarra's matter-based pricing charges you per matter you're actively managing. We categorize matters as being Open (Active), Closed, Archived and PNC (potential new client). You are charged only for Open Matters.

You pay only for the number of active matters you manage. Our Matter-based pricing includes adding an unlimited number of users.

No per-user fees

Clarra's paid monthly pricing plans include a certain number of Open Matters. Each additional Open Matter is charged an additional fee per month.

How much can law firms save?

24-50% savings

Our pricing model aligns with your success and growth and can help you save up as much as 50% versus other user-based practice management solutions.

Do we have to pay huge upfront costs?

Absolutely not! In fact, you can even start for FREE. Our Free plan allows you to use Clarra to manage up to two matters. If you decide to grow with us, you can pay $10 per additional matter per month or trade up to one of our monthly paid plans. Our Monthly Paid Plans are the most cost effective way to use Clarra.
